

How do you feel?

The story of Hearty and Brainy

6th Issue

EQstudents
Emotional Intelligence
The mind that feels

Co-funded by the European Union

Co-funded by
the European Union

Project No: 2021-1-PL01-KA220-SCH-000029785

Project Partners:

Szkoła Podstawowa nr 38
im. Henryka Sienkiewicza
w Lublinie

Credits:

Hearty pictures: designed by DrawingMyDiary – Freepik.com

Brainy pictures: Nataliia Darmoroz / Alamy Stock Vector

City park scene background: image by brgfx – Freepik.com

Relationships are complicated, Hearty. Managing them can feel like juggling flaming swords while blindfolded.

Not if you've got emotional intelligence on your side, Brainy.
Strong relationships aren't just luck—they're built!

Fine, but let's break it down.
Managing relationships—how does it even start?

It starts with you. Self-awareness is step one. You've got to understand your own emotions first. No shortcuts!

Right. If you don't know what you're feeling, you'll just react instead of responding thoughtfully.

Exactly! Then comes self-regulation —learning to stay calm and in control, no matter how heated things get.

Self-awareness,
self-regulation... and next?

Social awareness! That's where you tune in to what others are feeling.
You can't connect if you don't understand their emotions, right?

Got it. But the final step is the real challenge: putting all of that together to manage the relationship.

Bingo, Brainy! That's where the magic happens.

So, relationship management is the final piece. It's about solving problems and building trust, right?

Exactly! But it's not just about fixing things—it's about growing together. Every interaction is a chance to deepen the connection.

Think about it, Brainy. With self-awareness, you know what you're feeling. With self-regulation, you keep it in check. With social awareness, you understand the other person.

And with all three, you can manage the relationship. Listen, communicate, resolve conflicts... it all comes together.

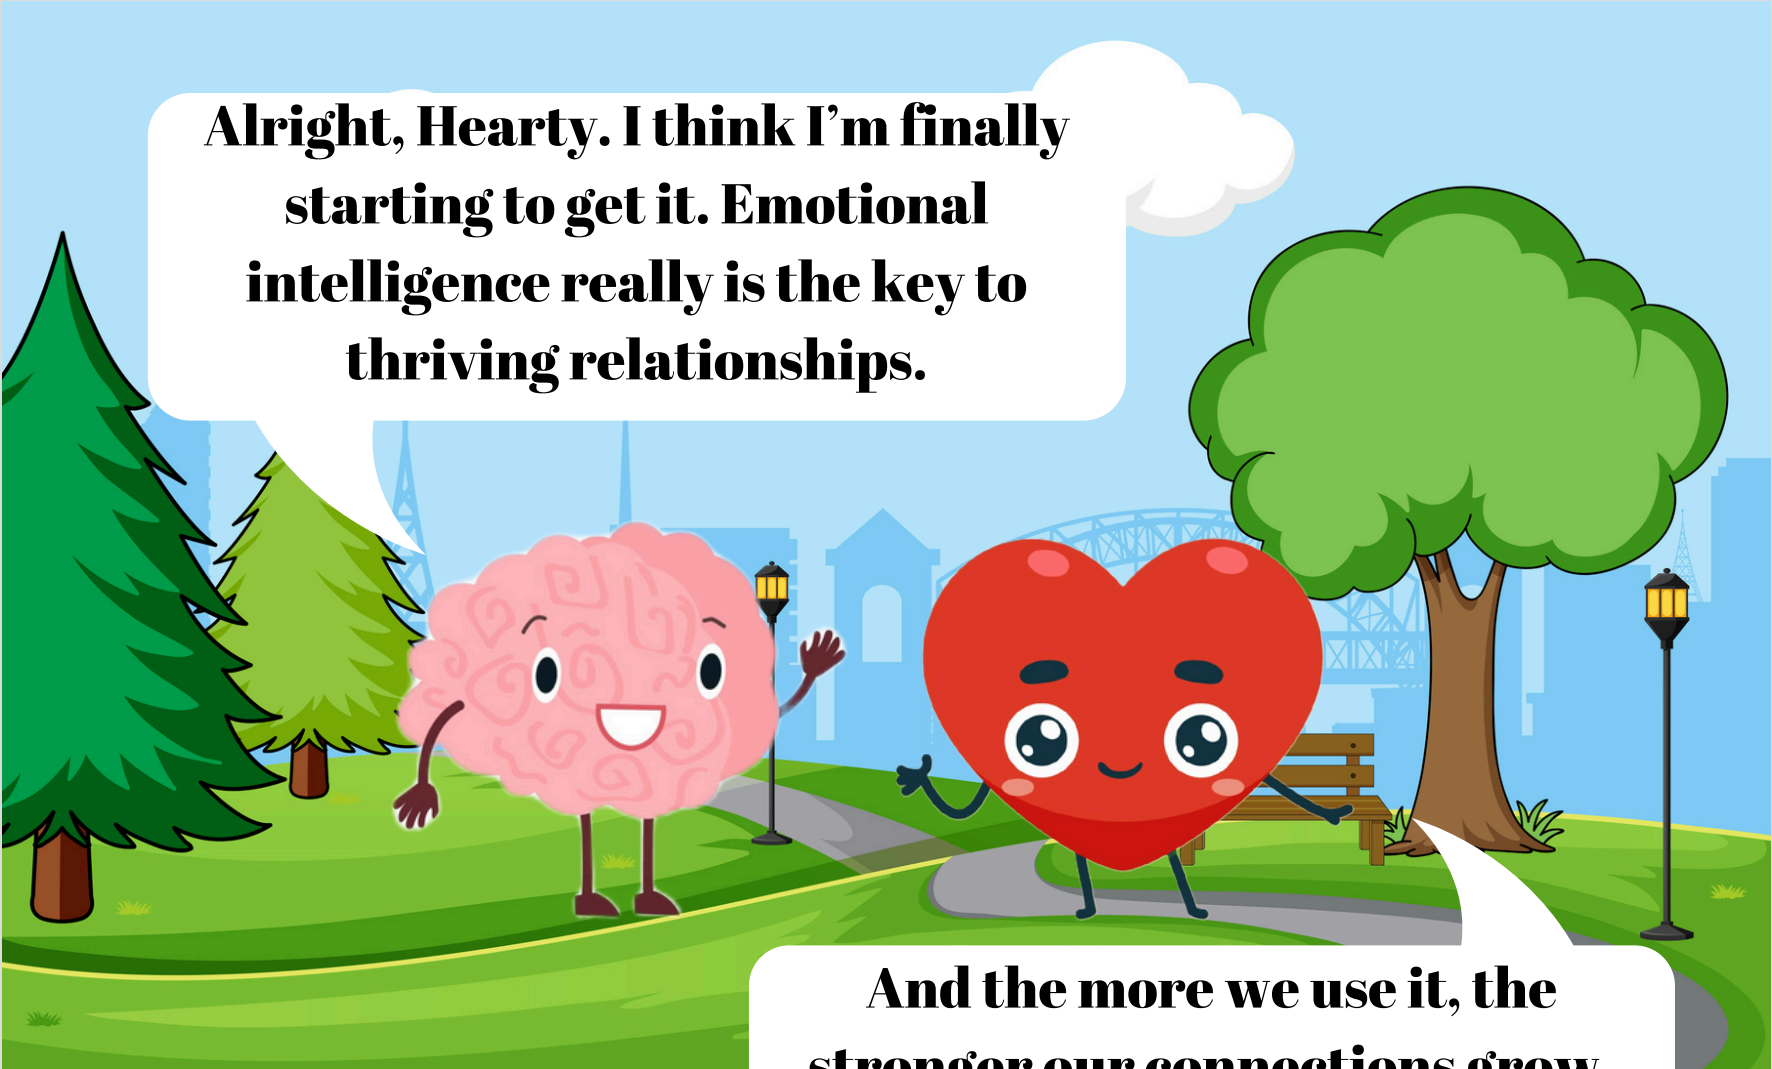

So, relationship management is like the final test of emotional intelligence.

Yep! But it's not something you 'finish'. Relationships keep evolving, and so do we.

Hmm... that means emotional intelligence is a lifelong practice, doesn't it?

Exactly, Brainy. And the better we get at it, the better our lives—and our relationships—become.

Alright, Hearty. I think I'm finally starting to get it. Emotional intelligence really is the key to thriving relationships.

And the more we use it, the stronger our connections grow. It's not always easy, Brainy, but it's always worth it.

Emotional Intelligence: The journey to connect, grow, and thrive—together.

